This is another of my gleanings from the internet. I wasn't born until nearly half a century later, but my Dad was born in 1906 so his perspective on life would have been much the same as the person born in 1900.

"For a small amount of perspective at this moment, imagine you were born in 1900. When you are 14, World War I starts, and ends on your 18th birthday with 22 million people killed. Later in the year, a Spanish Flu epidemic hits the planet and runs until you are 20. Fifty million people die from it in those two years. Yes, 50 million.

When you're 29, the Great Depression begins. Unemployment hits 25%, global GDP drops 27%. That runs until you are 33. The country nearly collapses along with the world economy. When you turn 39, World War II starts. You aren't even over the hill yet.

When you're 41, the United States is fully pulled into WWII. Between your 39th and 45th birthday, 75 million people perish in the war and the Holocaust kills six million. At 52, the Korean War starts and five million perish.

At 64 the Vietnam War begins, and it doesn't end for many years. Four million people die in that conflict. Approaching your 62nd birthday you have the Cuban Missile Crisis, a tipping point in the Cold War. Life on our planet, as we know it, could well have ended. Great leaders prevented that from happening.

As you turn 75, the Vietnam War finally ends. Think of everyone on the planet born in 1900. How do you survive all of that? A kid in 1985 didn't think their 85 year old grandparent understood how hard school was. Yet those grandparents (and now great-grandparents) survived through everything listed above. Perspective is an amazing art. Let's try and keep things in perspective. Let's be smart, help each other out, and we will get through all of this. In the history of the world, there has never been a storm that lasted. This too, shall pass."

PERSPECTIVE

Winning may mean losing,
Losing can mean gain.
It's all in how you look at things
When dealing with life's game.

If you have a solid foundation
And you deal with what is true,
Even when others try to cheat,
The Lord will see you through.

If you stand up for what is right
And do not waver in your stand,
You don't have to sneak or tell lies,
You can hold your head up to any man.

My dad was a steward of the land
Which bears testimony to that care
For without his training and legacy
It could be hurt beyond repair.

People who really know the hills
Can see that solid base
And their word is worth a lot
No matter what the case.

Believing without knowing facts
Is not worthy of the cause
So take some time and think it through,
It doesn't hurt to pause.

The truth will always bear you out
No matter what others say
For you can stand before the Great Judge
In honesty on Judgment Day.

Between the Lines

Dean Thompson

A couple years ago, when I decided to keep writing for another year, I mentioned that I might rewrite some sections of articles from the past. I know I have repeated some stories, or at least parts of them more than once. Maybe when my memory is required to think of something totally new, I'll have to quit even attempting to send words to the paper on Sunday evening. I'm going to use that option this week and start on the coat-tails of the high school reunion to fill in blanks in other articles with several different approaches. These snippets will all give you chances to say, "I've heard that before and I didn't believe it the first time either."

As far as I know, there is only one of my high school classmates still living and we associated for eleven and a half years before her family moved to California. Sharlene Reichenberg Elliot graduated at the same time, but from another state, although she did come back to Nebraska in the interim. My Aunt Etta Reichenberg, Kenny's mother, rented the little block building behind the bank, from Oliver Robb, and lived there during two school terms, to provide a haven, or boarding place, for her daughter Margret, my sister Evelyn, Mildred Cullinan, and Edith (Toots) Adams.

I've told you that this was also a 'haven' for me 'on occasion' especially on days when we took the 'eighth grade exams.'

When I started to high school in the fall of 1938 Evelyn pulled out of that mix and babysat me, and also Sharlene, for two years. Aunt Etta moved her own little house into town, it's the one where Ray Cerney lives now, and boarded some girls in it while Evelyn and I were on our own.

I'll slip in one more little fact there too. Grandma Summers lived across the street west of the parsonage and boarded Phyllis for two years and then when Margret graduated, 1941, she rented that little house of Reichenberg's and kept Phyllis two more years. I told you about Phyllis slapping my face, but she was accepting enough of me that she played Monopoly with me, and others, at both of those houses at various times. Just as well slip in the idea that Grandma wouldn't let us play with dice and our Monopoly set had a 'spinner' to decide the number of moves.

Funny how little things follow on the tails of the reunion.

I, with my mind on my high school class, made contact with Gary Marsh, nephew of my classmate Lois, and got in some more lip-flapping time about that group of Arthur citizens ending with Frank. It's true that Lois was in my graduating class in 1943 and spent four years 'putting up' with me but, hey, she was a girl. Aren't all 'she's'. But she never made as much of an im-
